IHOP launches streamlined, affordable menu

By Lannie Walker
lannie@postguam.com

Richard Hart, the president and CEO of Apple Pacific Restaurant Group, is more of a behind-the-scenes type of guy, by his own admission. But when the company decided to refocus strategy at one of its restaurants, Hart felt he needed to be the one to take the lead in reaching out and letting the public know about the change.

Hart came to Guam 20 years ago and worked his way up from a server at Outback Steakhouse to the head of a company that runs several local chains including IHOP, Applebee's, Pieology and, most recently, Olive Garden.

Success is not new to Hart, but he is also willing to admit when his company could have done better.

Hart recently took a good, hard look at the IHOP location in Tamuning and decided change was needed.

"There is a certain level of expectation that people have when they walk in," he said of the restaurant. "There have been times when maybe that has not gone the way it's supposed to go."

Having opened six properties on

Guam in the last five years - IHOP Tamuning turns 4 this summer - Hart is the first to admit that, sometimes, "things fall through the cracks."

'If I were a customer ...'

So, Hart decided to look at things the way a customer would. He slid into a booth, ordered a table of food and asked himself, "If I were a customer, what would this be worth to me?"

"I realized it wasn't worth what we were charging," he said. "I think it's important that we are honest about that."

Hart got out his figurative knife, started slashing prices and, "brought it back in line with our competition."

The company also reassessed what IHOP was serving, cutting 51 menu items and adding 12.

"We do have local items, but we have scaled them back to the items we feel customers were telling us they wanted," he said.

Doing what they do best

Hart said it is a matter of knowing who they are and doing what they do best, and "executing that properly for people that are coming in with their children, with their families."

Though Hart knows he is taking a risk, he said he is confident in his team and is hopeful customers will give them another chance to regain their trust.

"We are looking forward to people coming in and giving it a try," he said.

Report: Executions 'rampant' in Philippine drug war

MANILA (Reuters) - Impunity and unlawful killings continue unabated three years into the Philippines' war on drugs, with a pattern of executions under the guise of police sting operations and a state unwilling to investigate them, a report said on Monday.

The London-based Amnesty International in its report "They Just Kill" urged the United Nations Human Rights Council to approve a resolution calling for an investigation into the Philippines, where there was now a "perilous normalization" of illegal executions and police abuses.

A vote on the resolution by the 47-member council is expected later this week.

The exact number of dead in President Rodrigo Duterte's infamous

PROTEST: Activists and families of drug war victims display placards during a protest against the war on drugs by President Rodrigo Duterte in Quezon City, Metro Manila, Philippines, Aug. 28, 2018. Reuters war on drugs is impossible to independently verify, but many thousands have been killed, more than 6,000 of those during operations in which police said suspects were armed and had fought back.

The government has repeatedly rejected allegations that police have executed drug users and dealers and say victims' families can file legal cases against police.

Amnesty said the authorities used "deliberate obfuscation and misinformation" to make it impossible to monitor the full extent of killings, which overwhelmingly targeted poor and marginalized communities lacking the means or support to mount legal challenges against police.

Amnesty's report compiled in April focused on Bulacan province, the new epicenter of the crackdown, examining 27 killings there during 20 incidents, 18 of which were official police operations.

In three-quarters of incidents, those killed were on "watch lists" of people in communities with suspected use or involvement in drugs, Amnesty found.

It viewed those lists as unreliable and illegitimate "seeming to guide decisions about whom the police are targeting for arrest, or in some cases, to kill."

Hong Kong police arrest 6 at Kowloon protest

HONG KONG (Reuters) - Police arrested six people during a demonstration in one of Hong Kong's most popular tourist areas on Sunday, where thousands of protesters sought to raise awareness among mainland Chinese visitors about the political crisis that has rocked the city.

Protest organizers said 230,000 people marched through the streets of Kowloon, across the harbor from Hong Kong's Central business district, in the latest wave of demonstrations against an extradition bill that would allow people to be sent to mainland China to face trial.

Police put the number at 56,000 at its peak.

Chinese censors have worked hard to erase or block news of Hong Kong's biggest and most violent protests in decades amid fears they could inspire demonstrations on the mainland.

Hong Kong's embattled leader Carrie Lam suspended the extradition bill after violent protests last month when police fired rubber bullets and tear gas, but she has rejected calls to scrap it.
