Rams build star-studded NFL team

LOS ANGELES (AP) — No team in the NFL was built like the Los Angeles Rams because nobody else would dare.

No organization shares the Rams' unorthodox values or their depth of faith in themselves. Nobody else manages its high draft picks like Los Angeles does, and no team has navigated the minefield of mid-career veteran acquisition with the Rams' success.

No front office executive has Rams general manager Les Snead's audacity. No coach has shown Sean McVay's ability to blend newly arrived stars into a harmonious team concept year after year.

The Rams know who they are, and they're not changing until the wheels fall off.

"Maybe that's not for everybody, and maybe that's not sustainable," Rams chief operating officer Kevin Demoff said. "Maybe it doesn't work long-term, even though we seem to figure it out every year. But it's working right now."

Los Angeles Rams' Aaron Donald celebrates after the NFC Championship NFL football game against the San Francisco 49ers Sunday, Jan. 30, 2022, in Inglewood, Calif. The Rams won 20-17 to advance to the Super Bowl.

A team that hasn't made a first-round draft pick since 2016 and probably won't make another until at least 2024 is in the Super Bowl for the second time in four years during a half-decade with five winning seasons and three NFC West titles under McVay. Los Angeles is set up to contend again next season, even if every big-name addition walks away to cash in the rehabilitated value created by stopping off in Hollywood.

Jalen Ramsey, Matthew Stafford, Odell Beckham Jr., Von Miller, Leonard Floyd and Andrew Whitworth will play extensively for the Rams against Cincinnati in Super Bowl 56. They all started their careers elsewhere before joining the Rams, who gladly paid high prices to get them.

Many other expensive veterans already have come and gone. The Rams continue to write the checks and to trade away the draft picks necessary to keep a star-studded team on the field for McVay, who invariably gets these big names to buy in.

Everything works because the Rams have a base on which they can build — and no foundation is stronger than Aaron Donald, one of three St. Louis Rams left on the roster six seasons after their LA homecoming.

"They've got a special way of doing things here," said Miller, their latest prize midseason acquisition. "You see it all throughout the organization. Everything about this place is special."

They're known for their flashy moves, but the Rams also draft effectively and develop relentlessly. In fact, Los Angeles had more players on its roster this season who were drafted by the team than any other club, while their 33 homegrown players — draft picks and undrafted free agents — were the most on any championship game roster.

"People don't think that about us," Demoff said. "They don't remember that we've had the second-most draft picks of any franchise since 2017. They just look at the shiny objects, as Les calls them, the No. 1 picks, and say, 'Well, that's how you build a team.'" could get it going," he said. Then came the lockdown.

Can't stop

"When the quarantine hit, it made me realize how much I miss sports," he said. "So me and my boys got together, started going to the gym to work out, and I started running. It was hard, and then it got easier."

His older brothers John and Michael Topasna were experienced runners with marathons under their belts, and they helped in a way that only brothers could. Isaiah was the youngest of seven siblings, so he was used to having to claw his way to the front.

His brothers helped him gain the cardio he needed to go full speed all game long. His boys from school — Zavier Camacho, Kaden Rosalin, Josiah Quintanilla, Tanner Calvo, Ethan Jesus and Alejo Aguon — worked out with him at the gym and got him strong.

New Isaiah

So when football rolled around, most people didn't recognize him. They wondered where French Fries the lineman was. Isaiah Topasna developed a muscular, wiry 170-pound frame, long curly hair, and he was two inches taller. And his coach Jonas Escudra gave him the ball.

Months later, with football accolades behind him and soccer season in full swing, Topasna is one of the fastest athletes on the field. He realized he was faster, he said, when he started outrunning the dogs that used to chase him on his running route. He remembered what his brother said to him once:

"He said, 'You're like a can of Spam. But if you put in all that extra work, Spam can be amazing,'" said Isaiah. "And I knew I wanted to be amazing."

His mom Laura Topasna is still an excellent cook who whips up his favorites in a flash: taco night, kadun pika, barbecue ribs and his favorite lasagna. He just eats less. The same with his junk food, so there's fewer churisos Espanol and hot Cheetos, and a lot less black tea.

"Drinking water helps. You should drink after you eat, and wait to see if you're still hungry," he said.

Topasna was a key player in the Dolphins third place season, the highest football finish ever for the school. There's soccer now, and rugby afterward. His three favorite activities in a row.

Eating too, remains one of his favorite activities, he said. He just enjoys it less. Pacific Daily News reporter Jojo Santo Tomas covers sports and food. Email him at jsantotomas@guampdn.com.
