	Transfers oversight of Podiatrists to the Guam Board of Medical Examiners
	ii. Public Law 38-43 (Bill No. 123-38)  Transfers oversight of Physician Assistants to the Guam Board of Medical Examiners  B. Hattori reported that Bill 56-38 and Bill 123-38, have both lapsed into law and are now effective as of August 18, 2025. As a result, administrative efforts by the HPLO team are underway to transition all relevant data, applications, and fee schedules from the Allied Health Board to the Medical Board. This legislative change means the Allied Health Board is losing two members—Mr. R. Tajalle and Dr. Kim—who will now represent their respective professions under the Medical Board. In light of these changes, clarification was provided that the quorum requirement for the Allied Health Board will adjust to reflect the current number of filled seats, now reduced to eight, making a quorum five members. Additionally, it was noted that the board is still awaiting confirmation for two new appointments—a physical therapist and a speech-language pathologist—with HPLO committed to following up with the governor's office to address these vacancies.			Ongoing. Follow up with Governor's Office
	iii. Public Law 38-49 (Bill No. 100-38)  Bill 100-38, which has lapsed into law, introduces a new continuing education requirement for several health professions regulated by the HPLO. The law, introduced by Senator Perez, mandates that licensees complete continuing education credits in early childhood development and literacy. Although the law is now in effect, it remains broad and lacks specifics regarding the number of required credit hours or how these credits must be obtained. The primary responsibility for implementation will fall under the Division of Children's Wellness (DCW) within DPHSS, which plans to work with the UOG and GCC to offer standardized training. The HPLO is currently in the early stages of developing a structured plan in coordination with DCW to clarify how the requirement will be applied and to ensure consistency across all affected boards, including those for physicians, nurses, dentists, and pharmacists. It was noted that the training would likely be similar in format to the ethics courses already required for board members and is expected to be made available virtually for accessibility. Concerns were raised by Dr. Miller regarding flexibility and accessibility, particularly for licensees with demanding schedules or who frequently travel. Suggestions were made to allow alternative sources for fulfilling the requirement beyond government-provided courses. The board emphasized the importance of minimizing barriers to compliance and expressed a preference for a manageable approach—potentially requiring as little as one CE hour initially, pending further board discussion. Professionals directly affected under the Allied Health Board include audiologists, clinical psychologists, licensed professional counselors, licensed mental health counselors, marriage and family therapists, speech-language pathologists, respiratory therapists, dietitians, and	B. 		nutritionists. Notably, acupuncturists are not included under the current scope of the bill. The requirement will be added as a new section to the respective practice acts of each affected profession, aligning with DPHSS regulations. The board agreed to form a work group to collaborate with HPLO on implementing the new mandate, including determining the number of hours required and identifying approved training sources. Dr. Balajadia mentioned the timeline for enforcement, particularly whether the requirement would apply to the upcoming renewal cycle in December 2026 or 2027. Since the law does not specify an implementation deadline, the board plans to engage affected members and licensees to gather feedback and clarify timelines moving forward.
VI	GBAHE Complaints	A. GBAHE-CO-22-03 MFT Received 02/21/22 Complaint 2203 MFT is being referred to the Assistant Attorney General assigned to the board for further review. While no updates have been received at this time, Dr. Balajadia has agreed to follow the direction of B. Sablan on the matter, as legal counsel's guidance is being sought before proceeding further.	Dr. Balajadia	1221	Ongoing, Awaiting Legal Guidance
		B. GBAHE-CO-23-02 Veterinarian Received 12/28/23 Complaints 2302 and 2303 involved the procurement of an off-island consultant to assist with the investigation. However, no results from the consultant's report have been received at this time. Dr. Balajadia noted that the process required adherence to government procurement procedures, which introduced additional complexities and administrative burdens. 		C. GBAHE-CO-23-03 Veterinarian Received 12/28/23	GBAHE		Ongoing, No Update
		D. GBAHE-CO-24-03 SLP Received 08/06/24 N. Cepeda, along with B. Sablan, has been working on a case that is long overdue and has developed preliminary recommendations, including potential sanctions. However, before presenting these recommendations to the board for a vote, she intends to consult both with B. Sablan and legal counsel from the Attorney General's office to ensure that the proposed actions fall within the board's legal authority. Further guidance is expected to be sought prior to the next hearing.	N. Cepeda		Ongoing, Further Guidance Needed
		E. GBAHE-CO-25-03 Acupuncture Received 03/28/25 Dr. Balajadia discussed the complaint involving the use of the title "doctor" by an individual with a doctorate in acupuncture and a master's degree. She explained that the HPLO administrator had consulted with the Assistant Attorney General, who advised that under current law, anyone holding a doctoral degree may legally use the title "doctor," regardless of the specific field. This issue had been the subject of an extended discussion in previous meetings concerning accreditation and the educational hours required to obtain a doctorate. Dr. Chong expressed concerns that a proper doctorate should involve completion of specific coursework and credit hours, emphasizing that holding a certification alone does not justify the use of the title. He indicated plans to conduct further research and provide additional input to the board. Dr. Balajadia suggested that Dr. Chong document these concerns to potentially	Dr. Balajadia		Ongoing, Pending Legal Guidance

Item	Discussion	Responsible Party	Reporting Timeframe	Status
	support legislative changes, as the current law permits the use of the title upon earning a doctorate. B. Hattori noted that Attorney Chisa Tillman, who had been working on the case, was present and available to provide legal advice. Dr. Balajadia welcomed her involvement and requested a written legal opinion to assist in addressing the issue. The board agreed to await the legal opinion from C. Tillman before proceeding, while acknowledging that, as it stands, the individual in question is legally entitled to use the title "doctor." Dr. Miller emphasized the importance of distinguishing between traditional PhD degrees and the increasing number of professional doctorate degrees in healthcare, such as the Doctor of Physical Therapy (DPT), Occupational Therapy, Pharmacy, and Audiology. He cautioned the board against narrowly defining what constitutes a doctorate, as doing so could unintentionally exclude legitimate professional degrees that do not follow the same academic pathway as a PhD. Attorney Chisa Tillman acknowledged this concern, assuring the board that she would take such nuances into full consideration while preparing her legal opinion. Following this, Dr. Chong provided additional research findings, noting that legitimate Doctor of Acupuncture and Oriental Medicine programs, such as those offered by Five Branches University, typically require around 1,280 instructional hours over a two-year period. In contrast, the institution attended by the individual in question—identified as GIC—offers a master's degree program with only 3,579 total hours and does not appear to include a distinct doctoral curriculum. Dr. Chong expressed concern that awarding the title "doctor" based solely on certification or insufficient academic preparation undermines the credibility of licensure and professional standards. He reiterated the need for caution and emphasized that only those who have undergone proper training and completed accredited doctoral coursework should be recognized as such. Dr. Balajadia acknowledged the points raised and reiterated the board's intention to work closely with the Assistant Attorney General to receive formal legal guidance before taking further action.
	F. GBAHE-CO-25-04 CP Received 03/31/25 R. Taitingfong reported to the board that the investigation into Complaint 2504 had been completed following interviews with both the complainant and the licensee. While the complaint raised numerous allegations, none of the issues cited were found to constitute violations of any applicable laws. Therefore, the recommendation was made to close the complaint with no disciplinary action. Although details of the complaint could not be disclosed due to confidentiality protocols, it was explained that the complaint involved claims of Open Government Law violations, abuse of power, harassment, and alleged misinterpretations of licensing regulations. The complainant, who was attempting to obtain licensure as an intern in multiple categories—specifically as an	R. Taitingfong		Unanimously Dismissed

		LMHC, and LMFT—asserted that inconsistent interpretations of licensing laws hindered her progress and that a change had been made regarding who could supervise and sign off on her hours. However, the board clarified that the change in supervision requirements had already been implemented, with current regulations requiring five years of experience for master's-level supervisors and three years for those with a doctorate, such as psychiatrists or psychologists. Ultimately, it was emphasized that the complaint did not pertain to the licensee's professional practice and instead involved broader concerns about board governance, which falls under the jurisdiction of the governor rather than the board itself. For this reason, no disciplinary action was warranted. Dr. Miller questioned whether it was appropriate for the board, as the primary body receiving these complaints, to be excluded from understanding their essence, even with identifying details withheld. In response, C. Tillman explained that Guam statutes do not specifically address who within the board should be privy to complaint contents, especially those concerning administrative matters rather than direct threats to public safety or patient care. C. Tillman clarified that internal standing operating procedures, rather than statutory directives, currently govern the complaint process and that if the board feels limited by those procedures, they could consider addressing it internally. Following this clarification, the board returned to the matter of Complaint 2504, and based on the investigation findings, which concluded that the complaint did not violate any provision of the Allied Health Practice Act and warranted no disciplinary action, the board proceeded with a motion to close the case. Motion to Close: N. San Nicolas confirmed that she had drafted and submitted a letter addressing this issue to B. Sablan, who then forwarded it to Senator Lujan's office. # Innovate: What Guam can learn from Huntsville

By Robert Jackson
For Pacific Daily News

Here's the playbook, Guam.

Communities don't "get lucky." They choose a mission, align their institutions, and compound small wins for decades.

Huntsville, Alabama—"Rocket City"—can be a blueprint. And right now, with U.S. Space Command newly announced for Redstone Arsenal, Huntsville is doubling down on a story that started in the 1950s and still creates opportunity today.

After World War II, Huntsville bet on rocketry. German engineers brought to the U.S. under Operation Paperclip—most famously Wernher von Braun—migrated from Fort Bliss to Redstone Arsenal, and in 1960, the Marshall Space Flight Center was born.

Von Braun became its first director and created the Saturn V, the engine of the Apollo era. That single decision, co-locating world-class talent with a clear national mission, hard-wired Huntsville's identity into space and defense for generations.

The compound effects haven't stopped. Redstone today anchors Army Materiel Command, the Space and Missile Defense Command, Missile Defense Agency elements, and a fast-growing FBI campus building out cyber, forensics, and training, creating an ecosystem where engineers, operators, and entrepreneurs mix every day.

What about inclusive prosperity? You'll hear a popular claim that Huntsville once had the most Black millionaires per capita. Whether or not that superlative can be proven, the city undeniably cultivated a significant Black middle-class and a rising generation of Black founders riding today's tech and defense tailwinds. Mission-driven growth can—and should—lift everyone.

Now, zoom out. This "mission flywheel" shows up in other places Guam should study:

- Adelaide, South Australia, chose defense and space as its north star. The Australian Space Agency set up in Adelaide; the Osborne Naval Shipyard is expanding to build AUKUS nuclear-powered submarines; Lot Fourteen is a buzzing innovation district where prime contractors, startups, and universities collide. They made defense a civic project, not just a base project.

- Singapore went all-in on being a "Smart Nation" in 2014—using government demand to pull innovation into the market and backing it with institutions like ST Engineering, a global defense/tech powerhouse. Policy clarity + procurement velocity = compounding capability.

- Seattle blended Boeing's defense-aerospace roots with a software supercluster (Microsoft, Amazon) and research depth at the University of Washington. It's a case study in dual-use innovation, where military-hard problems meet cloud, AI, and logistics at scale.

- Silicon Valley's origin story isn't just garages, its defense dollars, Stanford, Moffett Field, and early ARPA (Advanced Research Products Agency) bets that de-risked breakthrough tech and birthed venture capital. The lesson: universities + federal missions + risk finance can shape a region's destiny.

So, what's the Guam/Micronesia version of this flywheel? Here's the "Rob The Innovation Coach" gameplan.

It is practical, near-term, and ours to start now:

- 1) Pick the anchor missions. Huntsville had rockets; Adelaide has subs; Singapore has Smart Nation. Guam's anchors are hiding in plain sight: sustainment, readiness, maritime domain awareness, undersea/reef tech, rapid repair/additive manufacturing, and resilient communications.

Then market them relentlessly as one portfolio (If you brand it, they will come).

- 2) Put the mission under one physical roof. We should designate a Guam Defense and Dual-Use Innovation District linking the Port of Guam, University of Guam, Guam Community College, with shared labs, a secure prototyping bay, and an "Innovation Hall" where private industry and students co-work.

- 3) Align institutions to the flywheel. In Huntsville, the city, Chamber, Redstone, and NASA sing from one hymnal. For Guam, that means Governor's Office + Guam Economic Development Authority + Guam Power Authority + UOG/GCC + Joint Region Marianas + private sector agreeing on three to five yearly deliverables, including the number of cleared apprentices, number of fielded prototypes, number of new federal IDIQs (Indefinite Delivery, Indefinite Quantity) captured, and the number of dual-use startups launched.

- 4) Government as the first, fast customer. Singapore's Smart Nation program turned public needs into market-making pilots. Guam can do the same: buy local for port sensors, coastline communications, smart-grid reliability, and emergency management AI. Then scale what works across Micronesia. Make procurement velocity a competitive advantage.

- 5) Build the workforce on purpose. Huntsville's edge is engineers per capita; ours can be "multi-capable techs" who can weld on Monday, drone-inspect on Tuesday, code on Wednesday, and brief a client on Thursday. Micro-badges, apprenticeships, and a tech academy (co-run by GCC/UOG/industry) can 10 times our local talent pipeline in 24 months.

- 6) Tell one story to Washington and Wall Street. Huntsville's brand is so strong that an Axios story reads like a perfect pitch about the cost of living, salaries, and lifestyle.

Guam needs that unified "Why Guam, Why now" story, anchored in innovation and prosperity.

We just finished the Guam Defense Forum. Now Guam can demonstrate that when a community adopts a mission and organizes everything including zoning, schools, permitting, private industry, and universities, around that single mission, prosperity becomes predictable.

That's how a small island becomes a big player in the 21st century. That's how we turn today's headlines into tomorrow's paychecks.

Let's go build.
