crazy in itself," she said.

NFL cheerleaders normally don't travel with the team for away games. The Super Bowl, however, is a different story. The entire organization goes.

One of the cool things for Bailey and the Seahawks dancers was appearing on the Today Show in San Francisco just days before.

When did it hit?

"Probably the day we left (Seattle to San Francisco). Leaving with 20 other people in our uniforms, that's when it really hit me and most exciting. I was like, 'Wow, I'm leaving here for a reason and seeing people at the airport recognize us was kind of crazy," she said. "I even ran into a lady from Guam who ran up to our team and asked, 'who's the girl from Guam?' Turns out she's from Santa Rita."

Concepcion said she took a photo with her and a selfie because she knows how much this means to Guam.

"That being said, just seeing the outpour of love from people back home and all over the U.S. share their love and support for me, it really allowed me to take in the moment," she said.

Game day

On a cool 67 degrees at kickoff in Santa Clara, the game itself was no different for Concepcion in terms of the processes and execution. What was different was the environment. It's the Super Bowl.

"It was nice that game day felt the same, in a way. It was different in that I was trying to take it all in at the same time I was doing my job while working the Super Bowl," she said. "Just looking out into the crowd."

Just like the players on the field, the cheerleaders had a near-flawless performance. The only hiccup was a pom pom malfunction in the 2nd quarter. Other than that, the night went as planned.

Celebration

In the 4th quarter and the Seahawks comfortably ahead, the feeling of victory arrived earlier than a late-game nail-biter.

But once the game ended, Bailey and the Seahawks finally released the emotions of the super victory.

"I made sure that I lived in that moment and did my best to remember every part of that experience. I got to take home some confetti, which ended up being a bunch of mini Lombardi trophies," she said.

Concepcion said there were after-parties for the Seahawks and they ended up being "absolutely insane."

"Ludacris and T-Pain were the performers of the night. The entire weekend was filled with new experiences. Everything came and went so fast with our schedules being so busy. I haven't processed everything yet because it's come and gone so fast," she said.

Looking back, she said, she's so grateful and amazed by everything she has been able to experience.

The Super Bowl celebration continued this week with the City Parade along downtown Seattle on Wednesday.

Note: Concepcion was able to meet up with fellow Guamanian Hallie Wigsten, who works for the 49ers at Levi's Stadium.

"It was like full circle. Here's a girl also working the event from Guam. It was fun to share that moment with each other. There was someone from the stage crew that said 'Hafa Adai' but I didn't get his name," Concepcion said. "It was really cool to be surrounded by people from Guam at a crazy event like the Super Bowl."
