game aggressively, hit a brief lull, but the team's collective hustle kept them within reach.

Rillamas shined in the third, making his presence felt on both ends of the floor—diving for loose balls, attacking the basket and setting the defensive tone.

Still, the scoreboard read 36-35 in favor of St. Paul heading into the fourth.

The final quarter was where JFK shined as they pulled ahead within the first minute, finally flipping the script.

However, with four minutes remaining, the Islanders attempted to manage the clock a little too early, and the Warriors surged back with relentless hustle.

With under a minute to play, St. Paul regained the lead, and the gym tightened with every possession.

The Islanders tried to force the ball to Rillamas in the closing moments, looking to their senior leader for one last answer.

Instead, the sequence resulted in fouls that gave the Warriors opportunities to extend their advantage.

Late-game heroics

After a missed free throw by Bork, Macapinlac secures the rebound—a moment that changed everything.

Before pushing the ball upcourt, Macapinlac dished to teammate Kalden Kusto, who then cut and received it right back after Macapinlac gained space by crossing the court.

Spotting Yurko sprinting into an open position near the arc, Macapinlac fired the pass ahead.

Yurko rose up with a double-team on him for the final shot: a three-point shot that sent the Islanders' bench and crowd into celebration.

Teammates greeted him with cheers and a crown in recognition of the shot that sealed the 49-48 win.

Rillamas: Player of the Game

While Yurko delivered

the final blow, Rillamas' consistency earned him Player of the Game honors as he kept the Islanders composed when they were trailing and continued to fuel their defensive intensity throughout the night.

"We need to be more disciplined," Rillamas said after the game. "I think we're reaching too much. We're gambling too much, and that leads to our players getting burned on defense and the other team getting easy points."

The senior credits preparation for the comeback effort.

"We had like five 6 a.m. sessions—just a lot of preparation and practice that helped us get the win today."

Despite trailing by one point at the end of every quarter until the fourth, Rillamas said the team never lets the scoreboard dictate its mindset.

"You just play. Don't look at the score—just play your game and trust your practice, and it'll work out," he said. "We're feeling good. We need more practice, though."

Rillamas said the focus now is on the playoffs approaching.

"I definitely think we have the personnel to make it to the championship. We just have to keep up the intensity during practice and play like we're the underdogs. That's all we have to do. I see us on top," he added.

Quarterfinals

The quarterfinals will tip off this Friday, March 6, at 6 p.m. The FD Friars host the Guam High Panthers, the Islanders host the Okkodo Bulldogs, the GW Geckos host the Notre Dame Royals, and the Warriors host the Southern Dolphins.

If Tuesday night proves anything, it's that the championship race will favor the teams that stay composed and execute—even when the margin is just a single point.

became increasingly difficult to maneuver.

GW stayed composed and managed to close it out, 15-13.

Championship match

Academy took the early edge in the 3's, as Lea Aromin and Jaedyn Punonbayang won in straight sets. Harvest responded in the 1's, with Keisha Chen and Manea Camacho grinding out two close sets, 21-18 and 21-19, to even the overall match.

That left the championship to the 2's.

In a strategic move prior to the championship, both teams adjusted their line-ups.

Harvest's Neisha Chen and Erica Cassidy faced Academy's Landen DeVera and Carmen Eugenia in what became the deciding battle.

The first set was filled with long rallies and momentum swings, but Harvest stayed composed and sided out late in the set to take it 27-25.

The second set tested both teams physically and mentally as wind and rain intensified, and after briefly trailing, Harvest regained control and closed it out, 21-17, to secure the championship.

Harvest's approach centered on discipline and composure.

"Keeping our cool and reading the shots properly. And minimize our errors and play our best, Cassidy said of their strategy going in.
