Zach Banner during his February 2020 football camp on Guam.

er round of football clinics on the island for players and coaches in February 2018, this time bringing along teammate and buddy Larry Oganjobi.

After his second visit to Guam, he'd get cut by the Browns just a month later. His best years came after signing with the Pittsburgh Steelers later in 2018.

Banner and Oganjobi came back one last time in February 2020 for another youth football camp at FD as part of Banner's B3 Foundation.

The pair departed Guam just in the nick of time before the world was shut down because of COVID.

Working within the Steelers system, Banner worked his way up to a starting tackle position at the start of the 2020 season.

After an impressive night to open the 2020 season at right tackle in Week 1 where his offensive line stats were just about perfect, he suffered a season-ending ACL tear. That eventually trickled to be the cause of the end of his career.

"I want to thank my family and friends, the city of Tacoma, the island of Guam, Lakes High School, the University of California and all the amazing people I worked with in the National Football League, especially the Pittsburgh Steelers and the city of Pittsburgh," he wrote.

The 32-year-old retires as a Steeler and looks forward to a career in broadcasting. Wife Alex is a lead writer with CNN. They have a soon-to-be 1-year-old son Noah.

Banner is the grandson of the late Ralph Sukola, of Agana Heights and Dededo.

around his shoulders after a Trojans win.

The 6-foot, 9-inch Banner got drafted by the Indianapolis Colts in the 4th round of the 2017 NFL draft.

On the 4th of July of 2017, he made his much anticipated return to Guam.

Banner hosted a Football

Festival at the Guam High football field and gym, attracting all the youth football teams on Guam.

Upon his return to Indianapolis later that summer, he was unexpectedly waived by the Colts, but he was picked up by the Cleveland Browns the next day.

That's where he learned from Hall of Famer Joe Thomas and got his first professional action.

Zach returned for another
